

UNIQUE TRIBUTE PAID TO P. W. PEARSON

Squad Named As First Game Played Tonight

New Ruling Lets Team Carry Two Minors, Jack Luck Chosen

Manager Joe Spillette has his softball squad picked and signed, with one exception. Under a new league ruling each team can carry two minors (under 16), to give them experience. Jack Luck, Jr., has the honor of holding one of these berths. The other minor is still to be named.

Herb Cain and Lawrence Molyneux would have been lining up with the boys in their first game. If the request to let pros from other sports play as amateurs had been granted by the association.

"The game's in the bag," is Joe's prophecy about the game tonight. "Easy," he says, with that big, wide, well-known grin. President Charlie Holmes is confident too.

The Monday night games weren't played on account of the weather. Town officials, maybe the mayor, reeve and council, are expected to be on hand at the Stuart Scott school grounds tonight to throw the first ball in the Aurora-Newmarket game.

Richmond Hill will play here against the locals on Tuesday.

100 Avail Themselves Of Free Chest Examination

Government Provides Three- Day Clinic For Tuberculosis

Demands are heavy on the chest clinic being held at the York county hospital this week. The clinic began yesterday and ends tomorrow.

Conducted by Dr. G. C. Brink, of the provincial department of health, free examination is given of persons suspected of or afraid of tuberculosis. The examination includes x-ray and in some instances a skin tuberculin test is used. Dr. Brink makes his report to the patient's physician.

There were about 100 applications this year, and it was thought at first that it would not be possible to handle so many in the three days, but The Era learned today from Miss L. M. Hill, superintendent, that the clinic was proceeding satisfactorily. There were 50 patients at the clinic last year.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS TO PAVEMENTS MADE

About $700 is being spent in repairing and improving town pavements at the present time, Councillor Arthur Evans informed The Era this week. One of the improvements is at the Millard and Church corner, where the pavement is being widened.

CONSERVATIVE DELEGATES CHOSEN FOR OTTAWA

Representatives of North York riding at the national convention of the Conservative party were chosen at a recent meeting in Newmarket as follows: Mrs. Train, Woodbridge; Mrs. Duncan, Richmond Hill; Mrs. Max Smith, Newmarket; Miss Connie Smith, Newmarket; Dr. C. R. Boulding, Aurora; Jack Sibbald, Jackson's Point; J. E. Nesbitt, Newmarket; and Dr. S. J. Boyd, Newmarket.

Street Corner Crowd Talk Of Rebel Wesley - Unlawful?

No Plot Discovered But Pastors Plan Joint Wesley Service

Finding three of Newmarket's ministers in a huddle on a Main St. corner one night this week, The Era thought the situation would bear investigation.

The gentlemen were Rev. R. R. McMath, Trinity United, Rev. Dr. D. McIntyre, Presbyterian, and Rev. Dr. W. S. Alexander, Christian-Congregational.

They might be plotting the overthrow of the established order. They might be talking treason. They might be an unlawful assembly.

A few questions from a reporter revealed that they were discussing John Wesley, an old friend to rest these 147 years and converted 200 years ago. These three ministers are planning a combined Wesley service at Trinity on Sunday evening.

"Why all this fuss about John Wesley?"

"He changed our whole world," replied the Trinity pastor.

"He wasn't a Presbyterian, was he, Dr. McIntyre?" The Era pursued.

"No, but the Presbyterian church has a large place for those who do good," replied the St. Andrew's pastor.

Dr. Alexander explained that his church was a mixture of Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist, united with the Congregational, and was therefore in the Wesley tradition.

The conversation then turned to the relative merits of sprinkling and immersion. This was a safer subject than the upsetting Wesley, and the reporter departed.

REMOVAL OF BUILDINGS PROCEEDS RAPIDLY

Work has begun on erection of foundation posts for the new grandstand at the fair grounds. The structure purchased at Agincourt has been taken down, and a good deal of it removed to Newmarket. It is expected that all materials from both the grandstand and barn will have been removed to Newmarket by the end of the week. Work is being superintended by Jack Mains.

A. D. EVANS TAKES
ST. PAUL'S SERVICES

Arthur Evans, lay reader, took the services in the Anglican church on Sunday in the absence of the rector, Rev. A. J. Patstone, who, with Mrs. Patstone, was in Niagara Falls on a visit to his cousin, Mrs. Evans, who has been on the sick list for the last few months. Services have been held every day this week in the chapel for the Rogation days, and communion was celebrated at 8 o'clock this morning, Ascension Day.

SCHOOL SHOW EVER BETTER SAYS MAYOR

Dances, Music And Cos- tume Provide Delightful Evening

The public school concert on Friday evening was a great success. Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd in his introductory remarks said, "This concert follows naturally after the music festival in Aurora. The boys and girls in public school took the lion's share of the prizes."

"This is the fourth year for this concert and it gets bigger and better every year. Mr. Jackson and Mrs. Seldon deserve praise for their hard work and great success."

The costumes were mostly made by hand and the teachers deserve much credit.

The violin solo by John McSkimming brought a great deal of applause. Solo dancing of Barbara Davis was particularly good.

The three school choirs, senior, intermediate and junior, sang splendidly and the dances were well executed.

The square dance, in which the dancers were dressed in old-fashioned clothes, brought a great deal of laughter, especially when the gentlemen swung their partners.

Several piano and vocal solos were greatly enjoyed and revealed true musical gifts.

The "Two Lovers" was unique. The players, Barbara Davis and Mary Margaret Webb, each took on the appearance of half-man and half-girl (two couples) and showed the audience some expert love-making.

The Gypsy Camp was very effective and the dances well done. Chopiniana, a dance, was lovely.

The pupils were well trained and revealed a great deal of ability. One of the treats of the evening was "Artist's Life," with a goodly share of the acting honors going to Mary Margaret Webb. All the players in this dance number were good.

The program follows:

1. Lullaby, Brahms, Junior choir;
2. Piano solo, "Ah Vous Dirai-Je Maman," Mozart, Barbara Pritchard;
3. Vocal solo, "I'd like to sail," Ursula Greville, Donald Davis;

GRANDSON OF PIONEER FARMER, Railwayman Dies At 84 Years

A member of one of Newmarket's original pioneer families, John Seth Armitage died at York county hospital last Thursday.

Born in Mariposa township, Victoria county, in 1853, he married Delia Pearson of Schomberg, who died ten years ago. Mr. Armitage was a railway man in the United States most of his life, serving with the Southern Pacific, the New York Central and the Western Indiana.

Mr. Armitage was a brother of the late Mrs. H. S. Cane, and came to Newmarket five years ago, living with W. H. S. Cane. He suffered a stroke a year and a half ago and had been in York county hospital ever since.

Mr. Armitage was the son of Seba Armitage, and the grandson of Amos Armitage, who settled on Yonge St. on what is now the Roycroft farm, about 1800. This was a crown grant. His mother was Susan Kennedy.

Silas Armitage, one of Newmarket's older citizens, is a first cousin of the late John Seth Armitage.

Rev. J. A. Tuer conducted a service on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Armitage had been a Mason for over 60 years, and received Masonic honors. Interment took place at Newmarket cemetery.

Not So Easy, Mr. McQuesten, Replies Hilltop Pastor

Ten Commandments Not Difficult To Keep Says Official

In a widely published statement concerning safe driving for the 24th of May, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario minister of highways, said: "Most people have little difficulty in keeping the ten commandments. They are few, easy to remember, and any violations are quickly recognized, at least by the violator."

"Yes, violations are quickly recognized, but recognizing and having the courage to stop doing that wrong are two very different things," said Rev. Dr. W. S. Alexander, pastor of the Christian Congregational church, when asked to comment on Mr. McQuesten's statement.

"If the ten commandments were kept, would there be any need for churches?" The Era asked Dr. Alexander. "Would you have any work to do?"

"If the ten commandments were kept, church attendance would be vastly improved," said Dr. Alexander. "The almighty dollar is worshipped more than Almighty God—ye shall have no gods before me! What about all this taking of the name of the Lord God in vain? What about common law wives, etc.?"

"But the ten commandments in themselves aren't a complete religious code?"

"Christ said: 'A new commandment I unto thee, that ye love one another,'" replied Dr. Alexander. "The ten commandments are a negative code."

"How do you interpret the commandment 'to remember the Sabbath, to keep it holy'?"

"I think we have lost tremendously by not taking God at his word in that," said Dr. Alexander. "We are given six days to do all our work. I do feel that the Sabbath should be kept in a very particular way, giving spiritual life and duty the right of way."

"The sports element of all centres are trying to get full control," said Dr. Alexander. "There is no question but that the Sabbath will be kept, but keeping it holy is a vastly different thing."

But Dr. Alexander would not condemn Sunday sports. "I think perhaps the church has lost out by saying 'Don't go often,'" he said. "People should avoid 'extremes' and should use their God-given intelligence in observing God's laws, is Dr. Alexander's viewpoint."

"I have run hundreds of horse races myself, but I have never won or lost a cent on the outcome," said Dr. Alexander. "And I have run foot races. I don't play cards, but I could play cards without harm to myself, just as I play dominoes or checkers. Why is it necessary to wager money on the outcome of games?"

FLOWER LOVER, 66, LAID TO REST

Newmarket lost one of its best loved citizens this past week in the person of Mrs. Anne Kyte Pope, who passed away at the private patients' pavilion, Toronto General Hospital, on Sunday, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Pope came from England in 1911 after the death of her husband in 1907, with her son, Edgar, now of Windsor, to join her brother, John Kyte.

After a few years Mrs. Pope bought the property of George Millard, at the extreme end of Millard Ave., west of Aubrey Davis' residence, and has since turned it into a veritable Garden of Eden, making it one of the most attractive gardens in the county of York, with its rockeries; its lily-pool, with goldfish; arbors and pagodas covered with climbing roses; its beautiful trees and shrubs, and beds and borders of perennials which later will abound in the summer annuals.

Her generosity and hospitality were unbounded and her personality made her home and garden the Mecca which drew her friends constantly, like a magnet. Her cheery presence will be greatly missed by her circle of admirers, but the loss to her family and her close friends cannot be expressed in words.

Interment took place, from the chapel of Roadhouse and Rose, Main St., at Newmarket cemetery, Rev. A. J. Patstone conducting the service. The esteem in which she was held was evinced in the numerous beautiful floral tributes which surrounded her casket. The pallbearers were Aubrey Davis, E. J. Davis, Arthur D. Evans, Angus C. West, Frank Bothwell and Fred Edwards.

With a family of his own, Mr. Madden has shown great interest in young people. Mrs. Madden too has been a force for good in the district.

McNeil of Willow Beach had 13 strike outs to his credit, and allowed only four hits.

The battery for Willow Beach was McNeil, pitcher, C. Fairbank, catcher, and H. Anderson and Currie divided the pitching duties for Baldwin, with Hart doing the catching.

Queensville softballers visited Sharon on Tuesday night, May 17, and lost a very close game by the score of 10-9. Queensville were two runs up going into the last inning, but Sharon put over three runs to win the game by one run.

A home run by W. Newfeldt, with two men on the runway, was a big factor in Sharon's victory. Glover and Ellis were the pitchers used by Queensville and Burkholder did the catching. Sharon used Pitchers Dew and Ganton, with Jack Smith behind the bat.

Keswick school grounds was well filled with a very interested crowd of supporters on Wednesday evening, May 18, when the local softball team played Zephyr.

Laughton pitched Keswick to a 13 to 6 victory, with Tillet as his battery partner. Keswick was out in front from the start of the game to the finish. Gordon Reinhardt, the pitcher of the Zephyr team, received poor support from his team mates at some stages of the game, and errors accounted for several of the local team's runs.

Bill Laughton helped win his own game by knocking a home run with two men on bases. The McLeod brothers of Queensville umpired all three games.

MAYOR, EX-MAYORS EXTOL PUBLIC MAN

"Has Given More Free Service To Town Than Any Other Man Who Ever Lived Here," Is Singular Tribute of Mayor Boyd

An unusual tribute was paid to P. W. Pearson, ex-mayor, ex-warden, ex-M.L.A., but still active as a member of the hospital and high school boards, in a surprise ovation at the Lions club on Monday night.

Dr. S. J. Boyd, mayor of the town, introduced Mr. Pearson as his guest.

"Mr. Pearson has given more free service to the town of Newmarket than any other citizen who ever lived in Newmarket," said Dr. Boyd. "Over 30 years ago he was a member of the town council and served as deputy-reeve, reeve and mayor, warden and member of the legislature. He served 23 years faithfully as a member of the town council."

"I am safe in saying I don't think we would have a hospital in Newmarket if it were not for Mr. Pearson. It was mooted several times but it fell through. Mr. Pearson rose to the occasion. Mr. Pearson has also served on the high school board."

"When Mr. Pearson retired from business he gave to the town the land on which the bowling greens, the tennis court and the veterans' memorial stand. He is one of the most distinguished citizens we have ever had."

"I have never been so described before," replied Mr. Pearson. "You are doing a great work in the Lions club. It may be of interest to tell about raising money for the hospital. They went around asking for $100 gifts, but you can't build a hospital with $100. Dr. Boyd was after me to help raise the money. I finally said to the doctors: I will do it if you gentlemen will give $1,000 each. They agreed to do so, and in a very short time we had $25,000. Best of all, the hospital today is paid for."

"Here in the Lions club you are doing the work that the Bible considers the most important, looking after the helpless, the poor, the sick and underprivileged, the nearly blind and the under-nourished."

"He holds a record, perhaps for Ontario," said J. E. Nesbitt, former mayor. "Mr. Pearson was reeve, warden and a member of the Ontario legislature, all at the one time. Any man who can hold those three offices in one year deserves a great deal of credit. He must have something that the rest of us haven't got."

"I don't think anything more can be said of a man than that he served his fellow men 100 per cent," said Mr. Nesbitt.

Another former mayor, W. H. Eves, told two stories to illustrate Mr. Pearson's character. "During the war when that cargo of munitions exploded down in Halifax, and this town gave $1,000 of the people's money, P. W. Pearson was one of the prime movers. The council approved the gift unanimously."

Mr. Eves also told of a dominion government house building project many years ago, when Mr. Pearson was a member of the council.

"Although P. W. Pearson was in the building supply business, and the project would have benefitted his business, he did not think it was a good thing for the town, and he opposed it," said Mr. Eves. "This project practically meant that the town had to go into the real estate business. Many municipalities went into that proposition and many regret it."

Visibly shaken by the tributes paid to him, Mr. Pearson, who did not know that he was to be the guest of honor, replied: "It reminds me of the time when I was a very young man leaving home. My father said to me: 'My hope is that you will be of use to your day and generation.'"

Vernon Belyea, Oakville school teacher, who was present as a member of the Oakville Lions club, said: "Our business in school is to teach the ideals Mr. Pearson stands for. I am glad I came, to have fellowship with such a man. It restores our belief in humanity."

TEN COMMANDMENTS EASILY KEPT?

Many Ontario newspapers last week carried a supposed statement from Hon. T. B. McQuesten, minister of highways, on careful driving. In that statement occurred the following interesting paragraph: "Most people, Mr. McQuesten pointed out, have little difficulty in keeping the ten commandments. They are few, easy to remember, and any violations are quickly recognized, at least by the violator." The Globe and Mail and other Ontario newspapers, the Midland Free Press points out, permitted Mr. McQuesten to go on and say: "Why, then, should it be any more difficult to observe the few, simple rules that are designed to save our own lives and the lives of others who use our streets and highways. There are fewer than ten, and at least as easy to understand. And there can never be any doubt in a driver's mind whether or not he has violated a traffic rule."

Not So Bad As "The Good Lord"

Mr. McQuesten's publicity man, for it is not to be supposed that Mr. McQuesten ever saw this amazing statement until he read it in the newspapers, recalls Clemenceau's famous quip at the expense of Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Clemenceau said that Mr. Wilson with his 14 points was "worse than God Almighty—le bon Dieu had only ten." Mr. McQuesten has only eight points, and it may be concluded that he therefore ranks pretty high. It would be interesting to know, however, how many accidents would be eliminated, if Mr. McQuesten were to take one of the more drastic points from the notebook of "le bon Dieu" and stop us from motoring on the sabbath, "to keep it holy," until we have learned how to be more careful drivers. Unfortunately, more highway accidents occur on Sundays than on any other day.

The Eight Commandments

Now we give you Mr. McQuesten's code, which is not impossible to keep: drive at a safe speed, keep to the right, never pass on a hill or curve when the view is obstructed, don't park on the highway, signal in plenty of time before you turn, observe all road signs and signals, be sure your car is in safe driving condition, and most emphatically, if you drink, don't drive.

THE KNOT-HOLE AND FENCE-GROOVE CLUB

A writer in the Owen Sound Sun-Times writes entertainingly concerning the problem of collecting from those who witness sports, particularly those who sit on the fence. "If there is anything at all in the theory of evolution we shall eventually develop a distinct species of homo sapiens, equipped with comfortable groove which will permit them to curve themselves around the length of our Victoria Park fence-Grandstand and witness all sporting events free of charge." The writer continues: "At the danger of robbing the world of a thrilling exposition of Darwin's theory in action, we would suggest the purchase of a quantity of barbed wire."

A ONE-SIDED ISSUE

Nothing makes us boil more than when a political party tries to make an issue, for campaign purposes, of something with which the opposing party does not disagree. It is suggested that the Liberal government at Ottawa may appeal to the country on the issue of Canadian unity, putting to the people the question: "Are you a Canadian?" Such an appeal would carry the unfair suggestion that opponents of the government are not good Canadians, and would tempt Conservative strategists to take up the challenge, and fight the election on the platform of provincial rights, possibly depriving federal Liberals of the support of provincial Liberal leaders in some of the provinces. But federal Conservatives would not do that. They are as much for national unity as are federal Liberals. Mr. King's quarrel in this matter of national unity is not with Conservatives, but with Mr. Hepburn, Mr. Duplessis and Mr. Aberhart. Mr. King could win no victory over the Conservative party which would effectively squelch these rebellious provincial premiers.

Nevertheless, Times Are Better

The Conservatives are foolish if they allow Mr. King to jockey them into a meaningless election on national unity. The present Liberal government at Ottawa went into power on a minority vote, which included many people who believed that they were voting for a more radical rather than a more conservative government than the Bennett government. The King government has been a laissez-faire, do-nothing government, aside from its fruitless talk about unemployment insurance, and the activities of the National Employment Commission. Nevertheless, business conditions in Canada have improved, probably more rapidly than they have improved in the United States. This improvement may be the result of the King government policy of doing nothing, of leaving business alone, or the improvement might have taken place no matter what government were in power. Business conditions, it will be remembered, were improving during the last couple of years of the Bennett regime.

Suggested Issues

Each one of us is entitled to his own opinion on this question. Certainly there are many people who believe that an aggressive federal government with a policy of social reform would not only accelerate recovery but would build dykes against a major "recession," in other words, another depression. Social credit and C.C.F. parties will appeal to these believers in action, and if Hon. W. D. Herridge has his way the Conservatives will appeal to the reformers too. That would make a sensible election. There would be something to vote about. Or we could have a two-sided two-fisted election on the railway problem.

Where We Stand

So that nobody may have any doubt as to where we stand, we say that we believe that it is the business of government to lead, not to follow, public opinion. You may disagree.

SUNDAY BASEBALL

The Barrie Examiner expresses opposition to Sunday baseball, which may be given a trial in Midland and Penetang, and states that it would be illegal to collect admission charges on Sunday. We have frequently advocated Sunday softball for the young fellows who can't afford to play golf, to go motoring or to travel to a swimming-beach on a Sunday afternoon. In fact, we have suggested that softball, keeping young fellows at home on Sunday, is safer than and preferable to motoring, which is indulged in by many who protest against the idea of Sunday softball.

Sunday Softball

However, we would not advocate the playing of league games on Sunday, for that would involve travelling on crowded highways for one team or the other. Nor would we advocate the charging of an admission fee on Sunday, for we are told that would commercialize the sabbath. But we still think that a town league of four teams, perhaps church teams, could play a softball double-header every Sunday afternoon, and that no one would be injured and many would be benefited. That is our opinion. What is yours? We would like to hear from you, and we do hope that there is someone who agrees with us, but let's hear from you anyway.

OUT ON STRIKE?

The Financial Times of Montreal writes that Bruce Barton, the popular writer, was elected to the U.S. congress on "a Republican picket." We knew that the Republicans were out, but we didn't know they were out on strike.

HOW DOES THE FARMER?

When farm communities begin to debate the relative merits of democracy and dictatorship, there is likely to be something wrong somewhere. There is nothing wrong with such a debate, but the choice of such a subject for a young people's inter-church debating schedule indicates that fair-minded people regard the case for dictatorship as at least arguable. Democracy is not treating the farmer fairly. The farmer is not getting a living wage and a return on his investment, although he may be getting a living. He is not able to enjoy an average standard of living and also save money to pay for a farm, or with which to retire in his old age, or to send his children to university or to give them starts on farms of their own.

Implement Prices

The trouble is not entirely with democracy, but farmers, as a natural result of their independent outlook on life, are slow to avail themselves of it. In the same way, farmers are slow to organize to protect themselves as sellers and buyers. They do not set the prices of the goods they buy nor of the produce they sell. The parliamentary committee, for instance, which reported a year ago on the price of farm implements, found that these prices were too high, yet the implement companies, in the face of this report, increased their prices last fall. The committee also said that unless implement prices were reduced farmers should be encouraged to undertake co-operative distribution. This report is now again before parliament, and Mr. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, has charged that the implement companies are making an unreasonable profit. The provincial minister of agriculture, Hon. P. M. Dewar, states: "If present conditions prevail, the time will come when farmers will form their own companies and manufacture and distribute their farm machinery co-operatively."

A Peek Into A Cream Can

While a lot is being said about farm implements, the price of farm implements is probably not much out of line with the price of many other manufactures. The trouble is that the price of farm implements, like the price of many other articles the farmer buys, is out of line with the farmer's income. One member of parliament told of seeing a farmer near Fort William separate his milk, to receive 80 cents for five gallons of cream. The member said: "And as I sit in this house and listen to the minister trying to induce the youth of Canada to take up farm life, I wish he would take a peek into that can of cream—five gallons for 80 cents. Those who have been brought up on a farm know what work that means. . . I do not say it is an argument against the price of separators, but I do say it is an inducement to protect not the seller of the separator but rather the man who buys it. . . I know something of organized labor, and I know it is pretty well able to take care of itself, but those who work on the farm have not been able to take care of themselves. . . It would take many a can of milk to show enough profit to buy a pair of overalls for the farmer or a new hat for his wife."

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

ADJUDICATORS

I was only, to my intense regret, able to attend the York Music Festival, held at Aurora, on two occasions—one an afternoon session, one an evening session.

Apart from the many lovely voices in the vocal entries, and the expert and promising performances of the instrumentalists, what intrigued me most were the judgments handed out by the adjudicators. To hear their verdicts, and their reasons for so judging, was as helpful to teacher or pupil as attending a school of music appreciation and criticism.

One of the things my better half and I enjoy doing, is marking down our ideas concerning each performer—his or her weak points or excellencies—and the number of marks we would give were we judging, and then compare them with the adjudicator's decision.

At times, we differ somewhat markedly from one another, and from the adjudicator; often we come within two or three marks of the number given, and for very much the same reasons.

But it is much easier to do this when it is for your own eyes only, it's an entirely different proposition when you have to give your findings before a battery of anxious eyes—and the younger those eyes, the harder to resist their appeal.

Many children, through these very festivals, are learning to be good losers, and is there a more valuable life lesson to be learned anywhere? All those judging, with whom I have come in contact, seemed to have learned the lesson of how to make the children SEE why they won or lost, and I noticed one of Mr. Fenwick's remarks particularly—that children should never be asked to sing in a key which does not suit them—it is dangerous to the young, brittle voices; it is almost certain to make them drop pitch, and they never can feel the same assurance of successful performance. He also stressed the correcting of an unfortunate habit which is common among children—slovenly pronunciation—angul for angel; children for children, and so on.

A child could not help but remember the simple but most effective way in which faults were shown up and good points emphasized.

In the evening the criticisms were a little more pointed, for without being censorious, the adjudicators showed what a lifetime task the study of music in any form is; and tried to make the contestants feel that music is a jealous mistress; she cannot be put off with odds and ends of time.

Battle Creek, Mich., spent Monday at Mapleton. Mr. Coomer worked on The Era staff 37 years ago, and married a Newmarket girl, Miss Kate Jackson.

J. C. Steckley, agricultural representative, will give a talk on "Ordinary wild flowers and weeds" at the Epworth League service in the Methodist church on Monday.

The Ladies' Aid of the Christian church will meet at the home of Mrs. L. Pipher, Prospect Ave., on Wednesday. All ladies interested are invited to attend.

In the House of Commons on Tuesday night, the question of the terminus of the Trent Valley canal on Georgian Bay was settled and $250,000 was voted towards the work via the Severn, with an outlet near Midland and Port McNicoll, which means that the Newmarket canal will be completed.

With Lake Simcoe opened to navigation from Georgian Bay, it means a big boom for the town of Newmarket.

The Office Specialty Co. is putting a large tunnel under Timothy Street, to connect the old factory with the new building, now in course of erection. The tunnel is 12 feet wide and nine or ten feet high and surrounded with reinforced concrete.

50 YEARS AGO

From Era file, May 25, 1888

Mr. J. G. Muir returned from Ottawa on Monday, where he has been during the session.

We notice by the Canadian Wheelman that Bert Cane of Newmarket has been elected a representative from No. 3 district to the Canadian Wheelman's association.

Wm. Mulock, M.P., was in town a couple of days this week. The family will occupy their summer residence on Yonge St. the beginning of next month.

Mrs. E. H. Clubine of Elgin Mills has been visiting in Newmarket for some time.

There will be a public meeting in the town hall on May 25, regarding the plans for a grand demonstration in Newmarket on Dominion Day.

Main street has been provided with another electric lamp at the expense of J. R. Mader. It is hung immediately in front of "The Leading House" and by means of a reflector illuminates the whole front of the building with brilliant

Mr. Atkinson said music was built on three plateaux, the first being elementary theory, and from it, progressing onward. He said some never got past the first plateau, and some stayed there all their musical life.

Mr. McInnes said that music was a spiritual thing—the beauty which will touch people, in a song, must come from within the singer.

He tried to find out exactly how much the singers of one song knew about its message, his songs, must steep himself in their atmosphere, before he could ever hope to make his audience conscious of the message he was trying to convey.

And Mr. Atkinson said practically the same thing in regard to piano. He said that students of that instrument have only the keyboard and pedals with which to weave their magic carpet of music, and that it too must come from their own inner conviction that they have a message to convey. He told his listeners that they should take the theme of a composition, and not only practise it over and over on the piano, but sing it, whistle it, screech it, if need be, until it was a part of themselves.

Then, said both adjudicators, "you will have such a mastery of your theme, that nervousness will not be able to wrest it from you, and secondly, there will be anxiety to do one's utmost, but the effort will not be retarded by the baleful disease called nerves—it will be second nature—a part of you."

The two male quartets were delightful and, as Mr. McInnes said of them, and Mr. Atkinson about the boy piano soloist, "It's a pleasure to see boys taking up an art so delightful."

Both quartets had splendidly blended voices, but I have a leaning toward unaccompanied work, as has my other half, and we both thought that just because there was no piano background and no music to hold, this particular quartet sang with more feeling, and a more complete blending of tone.

But both we would gladly have heard again. Both were marked high and highly commended.

I always come away from any place where an adjudicator works with the Gilbert and Sullivan line (with a little adaptation) ringing in my ears, "An adjudicator's lot is not a happy one."

But they do a tremendous lot of good; their words are an incentive to greater and more intelligent effort, and are an inspiration to try and try again, each time with greater success.

THE FURROW'S END
BY LEONARD HARMAN

On several Saturdays a procession passed our house. Three lads of about 12 years carried a saw and a hatchet on their way, we guessed, to the bush over the hill. Brave men striding along to conquer, expressing themselves in loud profanity.

We have been gathering wild flowers and have discovered the result left by the three woodsmen. On a knoll in the bush stands a peculiar wigwag structure. A dozen poplar poles had been chewed off with a dull axe in the cruellest fashion. Nearby stood the stumps, four inches thick and four feet high. In the wigwag was an old metal barrel, acquired from a roadside dump, which had evidently done service as a stove.

Most interesting of all was a effect, giving the place a very cheery, attractive appearance.

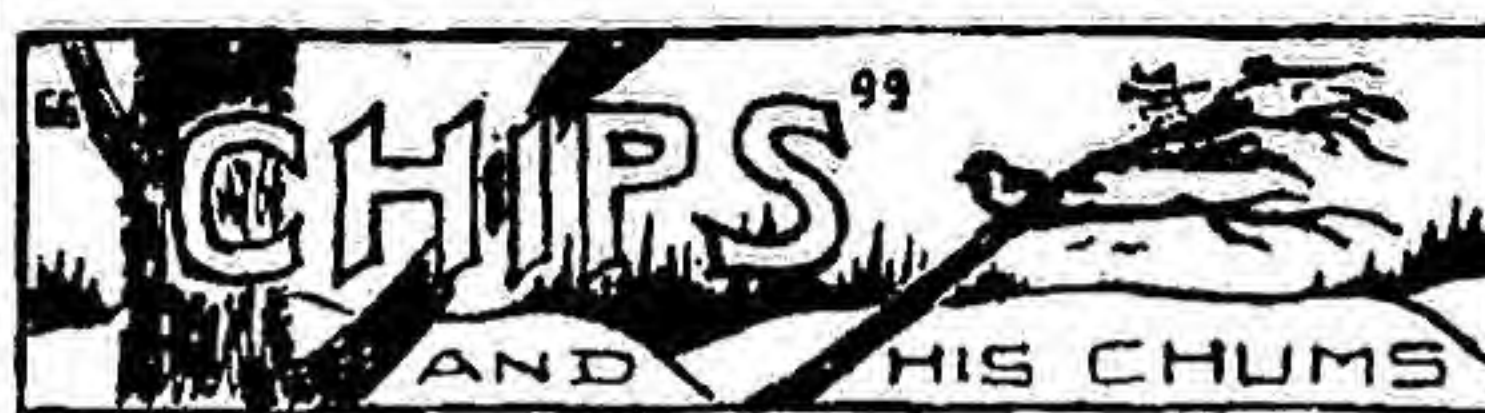

This spring has been very cold, and last week we recorded the snow storm of May 15, but according to Stephen Howard, it is nothing compared with May 15, 1838 (the date being remembered so well on account of the rebellion) when a man who was doing some out-of-door work on his farm near Holland Landing, had his face badly frozen.

It is hoped that some arrangement will be made about watering Main St. this summer. It should be done at about one-quarter of former cost, now that hydrants are installed. Perhaps some provision could also be made about the north end of the street also.

There was a very good attendance at the Gospel temperance meeting last Sunday afternoon and the address given by Rev. George Webber was highly appreciated.

MARRIED—At St. John's church, May 21, by Father Bergin, Thomas Doyle of Whitechurch, to Miss Catharine Gulan of Gifford.

MARRIED—At the residence of the bride's mother, May 21, by Rev. W. Percy, Mr. Wm. Greenbury to Miss Charlotte Pryne, daughter of the late Jacob Pryne, all of Whitechurch.

THE YOUNG PARENTS DO SOME WORRYING

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"Well, I heard Boomer, the Nighthawk, last night," said Young Chips, the Chickadee, to Merry, his wife. "So, he's back. I guess he's just come quite recently."

"Don't worry me with trivial things just now, dear," Merry begged. "Remember, I've got five babies, just two days old, to look after and I can't think of very much else just now. Do you really think they're warm enough in here?"

"My love, you've asked me that about 20 times in the last two days and each time I have said 'yes,'" replied her spouse. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they were too warm, all covered up in that mossy nest in the tree."

"Well, good grief, I don't want them to be too warm, either," wailed Merry. "Now, I'm worried that they are too warm. Why did you have to suggest that?"

"My dear, you'd worry, even if you had nothing under the sun to worry about," said Young Chips. "But I'll admit that those babies are causing me some uneasy moments myself. They look awfully thin to me. Do you think they're getting enough to eat?"

"How should I know, my dear," answered Merry. "I think they've had quite a little bit of food, but perhaps it hasn't been enough, after all. I guess you'd better go out and hunt for some more nice, tender insect eggs. That is the best thing to give them, I think. My idea is that the actual insects are too hard to digest, for them."

"That one little fellow looks a bit feeble to me," worried Young Chips. "Has he had as much to eat as the others?"

"No, he hasn't," answered Merry. "He isn't as greedy as the others, and they seem to get more of the food. I'm making a special effort to get more food into him, now though. Who's that I hear talking outside? It seems to be someone calling you."

"It is," answered Young Chips. "It's Handsome, the Blue Jay."

"Oh, oh, oh," shrieked Merry. "Don't go away then. Stay right here and protect us from him. And don't let him know that we have any young ones in here. I'm scared to death that he will come and kill them. You know his reputation for eating eggs and young birds."

"Don't worry, my dear," answered Young Chips. "I won't go away until he goes and I'll fight him myself if necessary. Before I let him go near the nest, I won't say a word about the babies."

"Hello, Young Chips," said Handsome, as he alighted on a tree, quite uncomfortably close to the one in which the young Chickadees had their nest. "How are you standing the strain?"

"What strain?" asked Young Chips, in as innocent a voice as possible.

"Why, the strain of being the father of quins," he shrieked back. "How are the babies getting along?"

"How on earth did you know a thing about it?" gasped Young Chips in horrified tones. "And don't you dare come near our nest. I'll get all the birds in the woods out to chase you if you touch it."

"Oh, oh, oh," moaned Merry, who had her ear glued to the doorway of her nest, listening to Handsome's remarks, which were quite loud and penetrating. "My poor babies," she strained her ears to catch Handsome's answer to Young Chips' challenge.

"Oh, a little bird told me," laughed Handsome. "But don't worry, even if I do like to get into a bit of mischief now and then, I don't intend to molest the nests of those I know personally. I wouldn't be able to look your esteemed father squarely in the eye, if it leaked out that I had caused any harm to come to any of his grandchildren."

"Well, that's something to be thankful for," Young Chips said, with a sigh of relief. "Would you mind just beating it then. My wife is nervous when you are around."

"Thank goodness," sighed Merry from her nest. "I feared the worst when I heard Handsome's voice. What an escape." "Sure, I'll go," Handsome was saying just then. "I don't seem to be very popular at this time of year. I simply can't understand it. But I won't stay where I'm not wanted. Goodbye."

"Well, he's gone," called Young Chips to Merry.

FREE FROM SCIATICA
FOR 35 YEARS*In Perfect Health at 73—Thanks To Kruschen

Thirty-five years ago this septuagenarian was helpless with sciatica. Then he heard of Kruschen. Since that day, he has enjoyed perfect health. Here is his remarkable story:

"Thirty-five years ago, I had a severe attack of sciatica, and could scarcely move for about six weeks. Then I started taking Kruschen—about half-a-teaspoonful every morning in hot water. In a few weeks, I got rid of the awful pain in my hips. I have never had to consult a doctor since, and am still in perfect health at 73 years of age, which I can only attribute to taking Kruschen Salts every morning."—T. A.

Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need of internal cleanliness. Eventually, they start the healthy Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid, every day, of all waste matter from the system. The result is renewed health and vigor. Ailments due to clogged systems vanish, youth returns, and life becomes really worth living.

KESWICK ILLUSTRATES TALK ON LIFE OF WESLEY

Both services were well attended at the United church on Sunday. At the morning service, Rev. C. E. Fockler followed the specially arranged program which honored the 200th anniversary of the conversion of John Wesley. Mrs. Link sang a solo at this service.

In the evening, Rev. J. M. Wilkinson of Toronto, presented his illustrated talk on "The Life of John Wesley," which was most interesting, there being between 60 and 70 slides. Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, who is a former Methodist minister, now retired, delighted the teachers and pupils in the Sunday-school, which he visited prior to the morning service.

Ladies are asked to please keep in mind the shower for the novelty booth, which is to be held on Thursday afternoon, June 2, at 2.30 p.m. in the S. S. room of the United church. A pleasant afternoon is promised. The regular supper will follow at 6 o'clock.

The Young People's Society will hold a social evening on Friday, May 27. This will be the last meeting of the society until autumn.

The Keswick Women's Christian Temperance Union held their annual meeting on Wednesday evening, May 18, in the Sunday-school room of the United church.

Mrs. Perry Winch and Mrs. Wilder were appointed as delegates to the county convention to be held in Willard hall, Toronto, on May 31. It was planned to give a donation of towels to the shower for Willard hall.

The election of officers was held. The same appointments were made as for last year with the exception of Mrs. O. Sutton, May 24.—Stanley Beechener was in the Sutton Private Hospital on Monday as the result of injuries sustained when the wagon on which he was riding collided with a car belonging to Les. Burrows and driven by Frank Kay, an employee at Sutton Dairy and Creamery.

According to witnesses, Kay attempted to pass the wagon as it was moving toward the centre of the road and misjudged the distance, colliding with the rear of the wagon. A pig, being carried in the wagon, was instantly killed by the impact. Beechener was removed to the hospital where he was given immediate aid.

COMMENCE JOB OF PAVING, WIDENING

Workmen commenced construction on Monday on the road connecting Sutton and Jackson's Point, which, in addition to being paved, is to be widened four feet on either side, according to engineers. This road has been in a very deplorable condition for years.

The section of the road at the Sutton end, which was paved five years ago, will remain untouched except for widening, since it is in good condition.

The distance under construction is about one and one quarter miles and it is expected that the road will be ready for use in two or three weeks. The job was undertaken earlier this year so as not to interfere with the summer tourist traffic to Jackson's Point.

SUTTON
DWELLING RAZED IN SUNDAY FIRE

Sutton, May 23.—Fire, which broke out in the upper part of a cobble-stone house belonging to George Huntley at three o'clock on Sunday afternoon, completely destroyed the structure before friends and neighbors could extinguish the flames. Mrs. Huntley and her family were alone in the house at the time, Mr. Huntley being away.

Friends, noticing the flames, were soon at the scene, salvaging what they could, while others were attempting to cope with the flames, but their efforts were practically in vain, so far had the fire progressed.

Mrs. Huntley, on learning of the disaster, collapsed and was given medical attention by Dr. O. M. Beattie of Sutton. The children were taken to the homes of friends nearby until it was learned that a lady had offered the unfortunate family the use of a cottage until their home could be replaced.

The building, which was valued at $1,250 was insured for about two thirds of its value, it was learned today.

In Memoriam

Moody—In loving memory of our dear brother, Frank Moody, who passed away May 29, 1933. From our happy home and circle God has taken one we loved, life is borne away from sin and sorrow.

To a nobler rest above
No one knows how much we miss him
None but aching hearts can tell
Lost on earth, but found in Heaven—
Jesus doeth all things well.
Ever remembered by brother and sisters.

Watson—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Roy Chester Watson, who passed away very suddenly, May 26, 1936.

Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
His vacant place there is none can fill.

Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.
Lovingly remembered by Wife and Family.

ST. PAUL'S W. A. MONTHLY MEETING DATE CHANGED

PASTOR PROTESTS AGAINST DRAWS

Editor, The Era: In looking over the town papers last week I saw two items that rather shocked me. The first had reference to the girl guides and the second to the Bugle Band. The first item informed the public that the girl guides were sponsoring the local dancing class in the town hall Friday night at a price of 25 cents and the lucky draw of groceries. Sponsoring dancing classes and selling gambling tickets is surely not the purpose of girl guides. Is it not rather a training for citizenship in personality, honor, integrity and truthfulness? Gambling came out of the shambles and leads back to the shambles. No organization needs guidance to go down in the moral scale but to go up. Groceries by a lucky draw is too big a price to pay for ethical standards.

The second item had reference to a "monster street dance and draw" under the auspices of the R. S. A. Bugle Band. The Bugle Band is composed of young boys in their teens, who need ethical training as well as musical training. We all appreciate what is being done for the boys in the band, so far as band instruction is concerned, but we deplore the breach of moral standards in street dancing and gambling. Parents looking at the posters must have a struggle with their own sense of respectability and moral standards in permitting their boys to have anything to do with such questionable proceedings. The town fathers are not free from censure in permitting gambling either in the town hall or on our fair streets. Surely the time has come for personal right living and social responsibility. Such conduct on the part of leaders of youth reminds me of the woman sitting in the window of an insane asylum, looking at the whirling city below and saying over and over to herself in her demented fashion, "Everything is a-moving, a-moving, and a-moving and there is nobody to manage the machine."

D. McIntyre.

ALMA BAKER SINGS

Last Sunday night the Baker Hill prize-winning chorus at the recent musical festival appeared in the Presbyterian church. Two beautiful selections were sung by the chorus and one sacred classical solo by the leader Alma Baker. Miss Baker is a daughter of the Hon. Morgan Baker, M. L. A. The church was comfortably filled for the occasion. Dr. D. McIntyre preached an appropriate sermon on "The Culture of the Soul."

Committee Show Progress In Town's Jubilee Plans

Further Preparations Made
For Old Home
Week

Aurora's old home week, scheduled for July 9 to 13, came in for further discussion at a meeting of the Jubilee association, held in the council chambers on Monday night.

Saturday, July 9, will be registration day, it is planned, and special services will be arranged in some of the churches, at least, on Sunday. On Monday it is hoped to hold a Veterans' day, though definite arrangements have yet to be made.

Tuesday, July 12, will be taken over by the Orangemen and the following day is being sponsored by the Aurora Service Club.

A good sum has been received from "old boys" now living outside the town. On Thursday night the canvassing committee will meet for a canvass of Aurora homes.

REYNOLDS ESSLER SPEAKS AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Both morning and evening services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church were led by Reynolds Essler, of Knox College, Toronto. Re-decoration of the church will be completed by next Sunday.

Definite arrangements had been made for a visit from the Mendelssohn choir on June 25, it was stated.

"I have noticed considerable comment in the papers, even in those outside the county, concerning the Mendelssohn Choir's visit here," Hugh Bowman stated. Their performance in Aurora would bring many visitors to town, it was felt.

Plans are being laid for extensive publicity. Banners and signs are being constructed, special stationery will be printed for sale in Aurora stores, and attempts will be made to get radio publicity.

ABOUT TOWN

CALLING ALL CARS

The car driven by the three break-in suspects arrested by the local police last week was a stolen one. It was stolen from Toronto. There's no particular news in this fact — thieves looking for an easy haul in what they believe to be the unprotected rural areas have done the same thing often enough. Too often — and too often the theft is not known until it is too late for the country officers to make use of the knowledge.

Ordinarily — when the theft of a car has been reported in Toronto — a card is mailed out to country police. They receive it in a day or so. Meantime, the car thief has ample time to drive into a country town, pick up some cash, and be on his way. The town constable may have noticed the car — but until he gets his mail, he has no knowledge that it is a stolen one.

Science has given the police a weapon against this sort of thing: the short wave radio. Toronto has a police radio broadcasting station and cars equipped with short wave receivers. If this weapon were made available to the local police it would result in greater efficiency in their work.

The arrests made last week were the result of quick thinking. But the fact that the men were first noticed was — with all respect to the sharp eyes of our chief of police — largely luck. If the chief had been given the license number of the car, together with the knowledge that it had been stolen, luck need have played no part. An arrest could have been made at once before any harm could be done. If it were generally known that country police were receiving the city police broadcasts, car thieves might plan their work differently — or even take up some other work altogether.

Why not give our police the weapon they need to protect us? The expense would be small — the protection would be great. It's an idea.

THE SAWDUST TRAIL.

When we were a child we used to be known as the carpenter's curse. Every time a new house was built in our district — and this was when they were building, in the west — we were there to see, to ask questions and to get stuck between the joists.

We got to be such a nuisance that the workmen would ask for time and a half if we were in the neighborhood, and contractors sought a by-law that would keep us in our own backyard. It wasn't until Dad issued an order appointing all carpenters as deputy-parents, with full pant-walloping privileges, that we were persuaded to turn our energies toward the hunting of gophers, instead of badgering carpenters.

Lately, however, that old feeling has returned and sawdust is once more coursing madly through our veins. It's the Dawson's fault. For months we've been passing the Dawson place and thinking nothing of it. And now we're thinking of nothing else but.

Modern builders have a lot more more fun, we think. Instead of messing around with a lot of stucco they have tackled a lot of glass on the front of the Dawson building — glass in two shades of blue.

Home owners may get past the glass without an envious glance, but a look inside will give them something to worry about. The insulation which has been blown — and we mean blown — in between the walls would appear to have a comforting message to all fuel buyers.

And the walls themselves have bowed to a modern influence. The plaster is gone. In its place is modern wall boarding, made out of gosh-knows-what, but looking — in form and coloring — like the interior trim of a millionaire's library.

The lighting is going to be tricky, too. Those who may be thinking of doing a bit of building on their own, or of modernizing their present dwelling or business place, will find many pointers and suggestions in the work being done at Dawson's.

OUR OWN WEIGHT

In a neighboring town, the other day, we were having an argument. It concerned our weight. It seems that we don't weigh enough. To settle the dispute we stepped on a scale, dropped in a cent and got a nice little ticket bearing the picture of a movie star. It also gave our weight: 158.

Still arguing, we walked up the street and tried another scale. This told our fortune (?) and gave our weight as 148.

We tried another and learned that we weighed 140. It was fair enough, we suppose. . . . We paid three cents and got three weights.

HORTICULTURALISTS HOLD TREE-PLANTING ORGY

Under the eagle eye of Charles Dodson, president of the Aurora Horticultural Society, members of the society, together with a number of "town" men, spent Friday and Saturday planting trees.

It is estimated that 1,100 trees, including spruce, red cedar and white birch, were planted at the south end of the town, on Yonge

St. The planting represents a worthwhile effort, the society feels, and should in a few years give Aurorans something to be proud of.

The society's tulip show, the first show of the season, is scheduled for Friday, in the town hall. Gardens are away ahead of last year, Mr. Dodson reports, and a fine display of blooms is expected.

"How Would You Change World?" Minister Queries

Present World Perfect For Man's Development,
Speaker Finds

"If you had the power to remake the world, what would you do with it?" was the question-topic discussed in the sermon given on Sunday evening in the United church by Rev. Byron Snell.

"Suggestions which have been made include killing the devil, abolition of liquor traffic, division of wealth, creation of kinder people and the elimination of risk," Rev. Mr. Snell said. "Another suggestion is that we leave the world alone, it's all right."

"We must remember the origin and nature of the world and its forces, and of man and his powers. We must remember the nature and design of the Creator. The atheist who believes there is no God, has no difficulties to solve. The agnostic does not know—he simply gives the problem up."

"The problem is for those who believe in God. If they so believe, then somewhere and somehow and somehow things must be made right. That is what believing in God means."

"This is not a perfect world," the minister stated. "The world and its conditions are in a stage of development. If men are to live and grow, is there any other kind of world possible? God might have stopped the world's

HOLD FESTIVAL'S ANNUAL MEETING

A meeting of those interested in the York Musical Festival will be held on Tuesday night in the town hall. Reports of the season's activities will be read and discussed.

growth just where conscience appeared.

"Man, as we know him now, would not have appeared at all, then. Or God might have created us as automatons—then there would be no ideals, no strivings, no victories and no fine attainments."

"God might have interfered and prevented evil. This would mean the negation of character, of growth and of self-control and achievement. God might have made man perfect, wise and good to start with. But wisdom is the result of experience. To say a man is good means that he has become good as the result of trying, that he has fallen and risen again."

"Can we think of any other kind of a world?" Rev. Mr. Snell asked. "This human life is a struggle in a moral and spiritual gymnasium through which we are to be developed and strengthened. There could be no other kind of a world in which moral training would be possible. Moral training means freedom and the opportunity to choose between evil and good."

LEADER HONORED BY CONGREGATION

Rev. A. C. Hoffman spoke to the congregation during the service held at the Aurora United church on Sunday morning, drawing the attention of the congregation to the fact that their minister, Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson, had recently been appointed chairman of the Toronto centre conference.

He asked the congregation to stand for a moment to mark the honor conferred on their minister and upon their church.

VANDORF Exhibits Curios At W. I. Meet

There was a good attendance at the W. I. meeting held at the home of Mrs. Ralph Willis on Wednesday, May 18. A number of the members are on the sick list and they are wished a speedy recovery. Those who were not present missed a splendid program.

The president, Mrs. Moynihan, had charge of the meeting. After opening the meeting by singing the ode, all repeated the creed and the Lord's prayer. Roll call, "A country I would like to visit and why," was well responded to.

After the business for the day was dispensed with, J. M. Walton of Aurora addressed the meeting on the early history of some of the farms in this township, showing a few curios and a splendid collection of drawings of pioneer life. Indian relics were found on the farms of Jack Skinner and Mr. Hale. Ralph Willis has a good collection of Indian arrowheads that he has collected on his farm which shows that it was once an Indian hunting ground.

Mr. Walton urged Institute members to take an interest in looking up the history of their own homes, and surrounding community.

Taking such an interest in our homes is one evidence of good citizenship. Do not destroy old records, and keep books neatly. Mr. Walton said.

Mr. Walton was presented with

But what we want to know is: how can we settle the argument? Anyone sending in our correct weight, together with a movie star or a fortune teller, will receive—free of any advertising matter and absolutely without obligation—the name of the person who won the argument.

Henry Taylor Celebrates 75th Birth Date On Victoria Day

Prominent Orangeman Has Missed One "Walk"
Out Of 63

Proud of the fact that he was "born in Canada under the British flag," Henry Taylor, Wellington St., celebrated his 75th birthday on May 24, in the Wellington St. home in which he was born.

Mrs. R. Lindsay and Miss E. V. Taylor, daughters of Mr. Taylor, and W. H. Taylor, a son, were with him on his birthday.

Mr. Taylor's parents came to this country from Yorkshire, England, in 1883, and moved to Aurora in 1884. He has two brothers, Sam, in Aurora, and Robert, of Toronto. Mrs. B. Milgate, a sister, lives here, and another sister, Mrs. Geo. Hargrave, lives in Toronto.

Mr. Taylor enlisted in 1880 as a private in "B" company of the 12th York Rangers. He retired with the rank of major on March 27, 1927, having seen service with the "York and Simcoe" in the Northwest Rebellion of 1885. He still holds an honorary position in the reserve corps.

One of Mr. Taylor's chief interests is the Loyal True Blue and Orange orphanage, on the board of which he is the representative from the Grand Lodge of Ontario West. He was made an honorary member of the Grand Lodge last year. He is one of two living members, whose names appeared on the lodge's incorporation warrant in 1890.

Mr. Taylor is eagerly awaiting the Orange celebration to be held in Aurora on July 12. He has only missed one "walk" since he was eight years old.

Eversley W. M. S. held their May meeting at Mrs. Gellatly's on Wednesday afternoon. The quilt was finished and will be on exhibition at Eversley church on June 15 at the golden jubilee service.

An invitation is extended to all previous members of Eversley Women's Missionary Society to be present at their jubilee service in the church on Wednesday, June 15, at 2 p.m. standard time.

Eversley Young People's monthly event was held in the church on Friday evening with a large attendance. Rev. M. E. Burch was in charge of the program, and showed a set of slides of some of the beautiful shrines and cathedrals and beauty spots of historic value in Wales and western England, accompanying these with a lecture. The choir rendered several selections. The scripture, the story of Naaman, the leper, was read by one of the juniors, June Wesley.

A very delightful feature was the concertina music given by Mr. Walsh, on his small English concertina, of which he is a master musician.

Miss White, so widely and favorably known by her pen name of "Bride Broder," daily contributor to the Globe and Mail, and formerly of the Mail and Empire, with Miss Miles, who is in charge of Little Trinity Housekeeping Centre, Toronto, and Miss Sils, have taken the flat at "Scots Wha Hae" for a month, and are spending the weekends there. This week they remained over the holiday on Tuesday.

Miss White will be getting fresh local color for her valuable writings.

Mrs. Walsh of King City recently had a Sacred Lily of India in bloom. It is a peculiar plant, growing from a bulb or corm. The spike (or spadix) grew rapidly till it reached a height of 17-12 inches. It was surrounded by its leaf or spathe, which on the day of its blooming unrolled and displayed this tall spike, not of blooms, for there apparently was no bloom, but this spike of mottled green and red, spotted, much like the spathe of a Jack-in-the-Pulpit.

The blooming period lasted only that one day, the leaf drooping, then the spike and as it decayed the odor of decay was overwhelming.

The Fergusons of Maple Avenue Farm had company from their old neighborhood, Downsview, on Sunday. Mrs. Clark and daughter accompanied Misses Annie and Ethel Ferguson to church.

DOROTHY H. EVANS WEDS CECIL TUCK

The marriage took place quietly in Runnymede United church, Toronto, on Saturday, of Dorothy Hilda Evans, daughter of Mrs. Roy Evans of Sharon, and the late Mr. Evans, to Mr. Cecil H. Tuck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tuck, of Richmond Hill. Rev. Mr. Canning officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, wore powder blue sheer with nightfall blue accessories and carried Rapture roses and lily of the valley. Miss Audrey Tuck, sister of the groom, was her bridesmaid, wearing dusky pink triple sheer with yellow and green accessories and carried yellow roses and lily of the valley. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Austin Tuck.

After the ceremony, the couple left on a motor trip through the States. On their return they will live in Richmond Hill.

Recently Aberdeen citizens met to organize a league for the abolition of tips. Sandy McTavish was present, but passive. Chairman—Surely, McTavish,

SPRING FLOWERS AND BIRDS

BY GOLDEN GLOW

Of all times of the year, this surely is the most delightful time for a car-ride, to see Nature at her best. The fruit trees have been wonderful; the flowering almonds and the forsythia, all covered with blossoms before the leaves appear, and the flowering quince as well, the former with its dainty pink blossoms, the forsythia with its delicate canary flowers, and the Japanese flowering quince with its beautiful red.

And now the lily-of-the-valley and the lilacs, and the tulips and the pansies. If you have seen the tulips at the parliament buildings at Toronto, you will know why I link the tulips with the pansies, for in front of the buildings, in all those long beds of tulips, they have a "carpet" of pansies, mostly yellow ones—and what a show they make! There are tulips of every color, from the pale yellow and bronze shade right through to every shade of pink and red, to purple and near black—and underneath, close to the ground, the yellow and bright blue pansies. Then at the side of the buildings are beds of tulips of solid colors.

In the beds at the entrance to the Private Patients' Pavilion at the Toronto General Hospital on University Avenue, are masses of pink tulips, all pink. Oh, they take away your breath, they are so beautiful, all of them!

And as if the flowers were not lovely enough by themselves, we have the birds and the squirrels, so full of life and joy. I watch my bird-houses every day to see if I am to have my usual feathered tenants to occupy them.

Right around here, we have sparrows of every description, and heaps of blackbirds, but the starlings and the crows seem to have deserted. (Not that anybody cares exactly!) The robins, as always, choose the most unheard-of places to build—the orioles are singing so joyfully every morning in the big maple tree beside my bedroom window—and when I see the branches wave, frantically and unexpectedly, I know that the naughty little black squirrel is busy again looking for an egg for breakfast.

The bird baths are always having to be renewed—but we no longer need to put out food. The birds splash around and have such a good time in their bird baths, and how they scold when a big striped tramp cat comes around looking for a meal—I don't know who owns it.

You should hear the flicker! I expect it has found an old tree somewhere near, like it did last year. Between it, and the noisy woodpecker, and the chorus of robins, so early every morning, you would wonder how anybody sleeps after daylight. And now Jenny Wren is here, so no doubt the blue martins are back as well to their old haunts on Main St. Queer how they come back to the same place year after year! You'd think they would prefer a quieter place than Main St., but try as we will, we cannot persuade them into the martin houses we built for them. Perhaps it is that same old tramp cat!

But I cannot end this without a plea for the lovely frail trilliums. Why will people not leave them alone! For they are so fragile that they never last long indoors as a bouquet, and once picked, they never grow again. Up at Island Grove I saw two Toronto women come over from Snake Island on Mother's day Sunday, each with a huge basketful—they were badly wilted even then, so what good would they be when they had been jolted 30 miles to the city. Ontario's national flowers show symptoms of being exterminated before many more years, especially if treated to such vandalism as that.

But maybe before that happens we will come to our senses and protect them, as those I saw in a little grove over at Prospect Park, Niagara Falls, U. S. A., several years ago. I recall it with great pleasure.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Wilfred Haven, attaché of the American embassy in Petrograd, leaves the Russian capital during the 1917 Bolshevik upheaval, carrying with him the Ostrekoff family jewels, worth millions. They are to be delivered in London to Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff as her only inheritance from her parents, who are under sentence of death by the revolutionists.

Anna Kastellane, whom Haven rescued from a Petrograd mob, accompanies him to the Polish border, where he is "kidnapped" by three Cossacks. They accompany him through a number of death-dealing adventures as far as Warsaw. There he finds Anna Kastellane, who has brought his baggage with her. He suspects the girl of being a Russian agent and partly confirms it when he sees her in conversation with Polish police and army officials. The latter make clear their wishes to obtain the jewels, but Haven outwits them. Through Anna's efforts he is able to hire a plane and she accompanies him. He awakens the next morning to find himself disarmed and the plane under the direction of two Polish army officers.

One of the officers was known to Haven and Anna Kastellane. Colonel Patinsky introduced Captain Esterhazy. Patinsky had been followed by Haven in an attempt to obtain the jewels. Haven was an object of murderous hatred, but his diplomatic status served to protect him. He instructed Anna how to act in the event of physical encounter.

Reversed Control

About 12 o'clock that morning some dried fish and a dish of stew was served to Anna Kastellane and Haven at one table and the pilot and Patinsky at the other. There were a good many clouds in the sky and light, driven snow was falling. It was difficult now to distinguish their course, but Haven believed that they had wheeled toward the south.

"Do you know anything about Odessa?" he asked his companion. "Not a thing," she answered, "except that I hope we are not going there."

"Why not?" "Simply because it is a port," she explained, "from which all manner of little tramp steamships cross to Asia Minor and trade around the Black Sea. There are heaps of places where we might be left and never be heard of again. Besides, there is a population there which is the most terrible in the world."

Haven turned to the table where the other two men were seated. "The voyage would be more interesting to us," he explained, "if we had some idea of our destination."

"It is not our object to make the voyage interesting to you," Patinsky replied amiably. "Make the best of it. It is probably your last ride in an airplane."

A bell at the farther end of the saloon rang. Patinsky's companion drained his tumbler of wine, swallowed a liquor glassful of vodka afterward, and stood up.

The bell rang again and their passage became more bumpy. Battering his coat as he went, the pilot disappeared.

"Observations, I expect," Patinsky remarked. "A very careful pilot, Esterhazy."

"Rather jolly if we all went down together, wouldn't it be?" Haven suggested cheerfully. "Executioners and condemned."

"There is no fear of that," the other assured him, with a smile. "Esterhazy is a great artist. If he were a younger man he would be famous throughout Europe. If he has called for the pilot now, it is because he wants his course settled."

"Wrong for once," Haven rejoined. "He's coming in. Doesn't like the look of the weather. I should guess."

Esterhazy almost stumbled into the saloon. There were leicels upon his coat and hanging from his cap. His face, when he lifted his vizor was white, with mottled patches of purple. He drank two glasses of vodka and then sank into the chair which the pilot had vacated.

"We are running into a storm," he muttered to Patinsky, as he poured out a third glass of vodka. "My heart almost stopped beating. I have reduced the speed and told Leon to glance off the wind. We may lose about a little but we shall be safer."

The plane began to creak and groan. Esterhazy, who had thrown his leather coat on to the floor, sat with his hand pressed to his side. Patinsky watched him anxiously and occasionally glanced out of the window. They seemed to be driving into a solid bank of snow.

"Do you think we had better come down?" he asked. "We will never start again if we do," Esterhazy groaned. "Take the map out of my pocket. I have marked the position."

Patinsky went over and fetched a bottle of brandy from a cupboard, poured some into a tumbler and held it to Esterhazy's lips. He swallowed the strong spirit in convulsive gulps. Soon his appearance became more natural. "Feeling better?" Patinsky inquired.

The other nodded. "It is my heart," he muttered. "I gave up driving for this." He exclaimed as the machine gave an immense lurch. "I hope our wings are all right. This snow is going to weigh like lead."

They were obviously slackening speed and, though the descent was unnoticeable, they were flying lower. Suddenly the alarm bell rang. Patinsky rapidly arrayed himself in Esterhazy's discarded cap and coat. He adjusted his goggles and pulled down the flap of the cap.

"Hope I will be able to stand it," he muttered, as he hurried off. They heard his footsteps climbing the rungs of the ladder. For a moment Anna Kastellane and Haven looked into one another's eyes. There was doubt in hers; there was purpose in his. Chivalry was a great quality, but her life and his—not to speak of his trust—came first.

Esterhazy was still stretched across the table, although he was breathing more naturally and the mottled patches on his face were beginning to disappear. Haven rose slowly to his feet. As though by a miracle his left arm was suddenly free of the encircling bracelet. He looked at Anna and she nodded. Her fingers closed on the satchel. Haven towered for a moment over the figure of the recumbent man, then his left arm swung round his neck and his right hand was in his pocket. If Haven at times during the last few days had seemed slow-witted, at that instant he was amazingly quick of action. His own automatic—Esterhazy had evidently discarded his in favor of the newer weapon—was in his hand in a moment. He held it out to Anna.

"Take this," he muttered. She obeyed without hesitation. Esterhazy was struggling wildly to rise to his feet, but he had not the strength of a child. Once more Haven's fingers travelled over the helpless man. There was no further weapon. He returned to his seat, leaving his opponent groaning and only half-conscious in his place. Haven had become a different person now. His eyes were alight. His brain was working quickly.

"I'm sorry to have to tackle a man in that condition," he said to Anna, "but it had to be done."

"Why not?" she answered coolly. "It was our opportunity. I should not have minded if you had killed him."

"They robbed me of this," he continued, handling his beautifully polished automatic, "when I was asleep. It's only fit for tat. I think our friends in front will have enough to do for a time," he added, as the plane gave another violent lurch.

"One thing we have to make certain of, though, and that is our friend the attendant."

He pushed a bell. His right hand slipped under the table. Presently the attendant lumbered into the saloon, pulling on his coat as he came. He had a solid, Scandinavian face, a freckled skin, a heavy, clumsily built body, but few indications of actual muscular strength. Haven waited till he was within a yard of the table.

"I am afraid," he pointed out, "Captain Esterhazy is not well. Give him some more brandy."

The man touched Esterhazy on the shoulder. The latter only groaned.

"He is drunk," the attendant declared indifferently. "He was half frozen first, then he drinks, and he is drunk. He had better sleep."

"Have you any whiskey?" "No whiskey—only brandy."

"Very well," Haven said. "You can bring me some brandy in a moment. Now, listen to me intently. My Russian is good enough. You understand?"

"I understand," the man acknowledged. "But you are not my master. You cannot give me orders here. What there is to eat and drink I will give you. That is all. I am the steward of Captain Esterhazy."

"Quite right," Haven agreed. "As a matter of fact, I wouldn't have you as my servant for anything. Now—you are listening, aren't you? Do you possess a revolver?"

"Do not. If I did, I should not know how to use it."

"You've never done military service?" "I have not," was the stolid reply. "I am a Russian Finn. I make the soil and catch the fish."

"Very well," Haven said. "I believe you but I must make sure. Lift your hands! For why?" the man asked.

"Above your head—and quickly," Haven ordered. "I'm going to see whether you are telling the truth."

With a swift movement his automatic stole from under the table. The attendant raised his arms. Haven looked steadfastly into his face, looked at the narrow eyes which had almost disappeared into bulging creases of flesh, and became very cautious indeed.

"I am afraid," he said to Anna Kastellane, "that I must ask for your assistance. I want you to feel in his coat pockets and his breast pockets. You need have no fear—I shall shoot him through the heart if he makes a move."

She rose to her feet with a scornful little exclamation. "How dare you think all the time that I am afraid?" she complained. "When I am afraid, I can promise you this—you will never know it."

She passed her hands lightly over the man's huge body. They stole round toward his hip pocket and he flinched. She tugged for a moment and threw an old-fashioned but fully charged revolver on to the table.

Haven scarcely allowed himself to glance at it. He still held his gun like a rock.

"Finish with him, please," he begged. "He has lied already. A man like this is dangerous to deal with."

Her hands continued their task. She threw onto the table a miscellaneous collection of articles. There were two photographs of women, a daguerrotype of two children standing hand in hand and, unhappily, resembling their father, an iron tobacco box, a filthy pipe, a pencil and a huge clasp knife. She resumed her seat and wiped her hands on her handkerchief with a gesture of disgust.

"I have searched from his boots to his neck," she announced, finally. "He has nothing more."

Haven glanced frowningly toward the revolver.

"Why did you lie to me?" he asked. "One lies always to one's enemies," was the sullen reply. "I am the servant of Nicholas Esterhazy. If you are his enemy, you are mine."

"I see," Haven murmured. "I also see that it is no use asking you any more questions. I am going to explore your pantry. Lead the way."

The man turned around. "You will not be afraid?" Haven asked his companion. "Esterhazy is helpless. You have the revolver on the table—shoot him if he stirs. If either of the two leave the cockpit, call for me."

"Why do you persist in thinking me a nerveless coward?" she asked, angrily. "Go away and stay as long as you like. I am perfectly safe."

The two men made their way—the attendant leading and Haven following—into the pantry and the various offices behind. A thoroughly careful search produced no results. In a tiny chamber beyond, however, where Esterhazy had apparently spent the night, Haven found that for which he was in search—Esterhazy's discarded revolver under his pillow. He transferred it to his own pocket. Then he laid his hand upon the attendant's shoulder and he spoke to him very grim words.

"What's your name?" he asked him first.

"Stenson," was the throaty reply. "Olav Stenson. I am a man of the north. I understand nothing of what goes on here."

"No harm will come to you," Haven guaranteed, "so long as you behave like a sane man. This is not a battle between myself, Nicholas Esterhazy and Colonel Patinsky. You have nothing to gain by interfering. If you interfere, I shall put a bullet into that fat stomach of yours and you will die in agony."

The man began to weep. Real tears coursed down his cheeks. "I do not wish to fight," he groaned. "I wish nothing but to cross again to Finland and see my wife and children. They told me that there was much money here because of the war and we were poor because there was no trade for the fish."

"At the end of this voyage," Haven promised, "you shall have enough money to go back to your wife and children. You can earn it in one way, and one way only. Serve food when you are bidden, serve wine, serve what you have—but interfere in no man's quarrel."

Stenson made suddenly the sign of the cross.

"Against no man on this plane will I raise my hand," he swore. "I will be the servant of the winner."

"Darned if the fellow isn't a philosopher," Haven muttered, as he made his way back into the saloon.

Arrived there, Haven found changed conditions. An absurdly early twilight seemed to have set in by reason of the storm, and, though it was barely 10 o'clock, the gloom inside and out was intense.

Anna Kastellane had turned on the one electric lamp from the switch by her side and by its light Haven could see that Esterhazy had so far recovered as to be able to sit up. He had been talking, too. Haven heard his last words—

"You shall be set free in whatever country of the world you wish."

"You couldn't include me, I suppose?" Haven asked as he entered. Esterhazy looked at him, and, if the fire of savage eyes could kill, Haven was already a dead man.

"You are a different person," was said, with a note of contempt in her tone which hurt. "Yet here we are, up till an hour ago, your prisoners. Well, you are ours now. Why do we play with this dumb fool? Yes, look at me, Nicholas Esterhazy. I have an uncertain forefinger. It is trembling and quivering even now. I have never shot a man and I should like to see one die. Tell me what you meant to do with us, or die."

If the girl's forefinger was trembling, her hand was steady enough. The small black circle of the revolver's mouth gripped his eyes and held them. Esterhazy quivered in his place.

"We are making for the Divnoff Marshes," he faltered. "Flat, uninhabited land for 200 miles. We are going to drop Haven there when we have taken the Ostrekoff jewels away from him. As for you—"

"Well?" she interrupted coldly. "I am interested."

"We are dropping you at the general's shooting box at Latchinsk on our way home."

Her eyes were like points of fire. "Why I do not shoot you, I do not know," she said. "This American, who, at any rate, has sometimes been helpful to me, is to be murdered and I, Anna Kastellane, am to become the woman of a greasy old general with a grandfather who made cloth. Oh, Nicholas Esterhazy, what keeps my finger steady, I wonder?"

"The man writhed in his chair. The sweat was pouring down his face."

"I will help you," he cried. "I will do what I can. I promise. I will help your friend. Let him give up the jewels and we will save you both."

"Why should he break his trust for carrion like you?" she demanded. "Do you hear me, Wilfred Haven? Shall I shoot this man? We shall be safe then."

For a matter of seconds Haven was sorely tempted. Then courage came back.

"Let him live," he enjoined firmly. "Killing is no woman's game, after all. One has to remember."

She gave a little sob as she lowered her arm. All the fierceness died out of her face. Underneath that tight-fitting tunic he could see the quick rise and fall of her bosom.

"I hate you," she declared, her eyes suddenly flaming upon Haven. "But you are at least a man."

The wind, for a moment, had fallen. A blaze of lightning seemed to open the sky. Haven became rigid. He pointed to the farther seat.

"Go there, Esterhazy," he ordered. "Patinsky is coming down," he added, turning to Anna. "I saw his feet upon the ladder."

Mr. W. D. Stokes suffered a heart attack last week and is confined to his bed for the present.

The gardens and lawns of many Mt. Albert citizens are gay with beautiful tulips and other spring flowers just now but one should not miss seeing Chas. Blyth's beautiful rock garden. It is a perfect picture.

Mrs. Geo. Walker attended the funeral of her brother, Mr. S. W. Cook, of Aurora, on Monday last. On Friday another brother passed away in the States.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stokes and Miss Ella Stokes of Toronto, were at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Stokes, on Sunday afternoon.

In the evening there will be a picture show in the hall and a dance. These are a few of the many kinds of entertainment and everyone is asked to remember the date and come to Mount Albert.

Mrs. Leadbetter attended a program at Hart House, Toronto, on Thursday evening last, put on by the teacher of tap-dancing and her class of Markham.

The streets of Mount Albert would look much nicer if children and grown-ups were both taught not to throw papers and rubbish around. The horticultural society is trying to beautify the village. Everyone is asked to please do their bit and help keep the streets clean.

Mr. and Mrs. James Slorach, Mr. and Mrs. Will Slorach and Yvonne attended the wedding of their niece, Miss Viola Johnson, to Mr. Charles Caves, on Saturday, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Wm. Barton, Uxbridge.

YORK HOLSTEIN CLUB PLANS PICNIC, JUNE 4

The York County Holstein Club has completed plans to hold their annual picnic at the new Glenwood Park, just south of Markham, on Saturday, June 4, when the newly appointed chairman of the milk control board, C. M. Meek, will be the guest speaker. Mr. Meek is a former York county man and the club hopes there will be a large turn-out to greet the chairman on this, his first public appearance in the county.

For a few years, the York club has joined Peel and Halton clubs but with the large number of owners of holsteins, grade and pure bred in the county, the executive thought that they should make this an all York day and of course, owners of other breeds are cordially welcome.

There will be everything there to make it a real picnic—races, games, swimming, horse-pitching and park lunches in the shade.

President S. B. Watson of Agincourt and the other officers are sparing no effort to make this a real day. They hope to have a lady speaker to address the ladies and after the sports, a judging demonstration and competition for which local merchants and salesmen have kindly provided valuable prizes.

The entrance to the park is one half mile south of the Markham corner and as lunch will be served at 12 o'clock, E. S. T., the committee would like the ladies to have those bulging baskets at the "cook house" in good time to prepare for the hungry husbands and famished families.
